Editorial Review

Amazon.com Review

Just what would possess a man to wear a giant carrot mask with a controllable flame on top and walk through the city streets fighting crime? Don't expect an answer to that question; instead, expect a lot of strange laughs in Bob Burden's Dada comics masterpiece, The Flaming Carrot. Years before he created the Mystery Men, Burden was chronicling the tales of the original second-string, blue-collar hero. The stories in this fourth collection of Carrot tales show off the strength of Burden's wacky, nonsensical storytelling, without losing any of the favor of his reverence for the inane. You'll meet the Carrot's littlest friend ever (a potato bug). You'll see the return of the "dead dog who leaped up and flew around the room." And you'll watch how Flaming Carrot fights off a group of aliens with no feet, with the trusty help of his bubble pipe. -
