Frida and Diego was a legendary couple, they both were revolutionaries and artists. Although Frida lived in the shadow of Diego, and shared his ideals, she created a painting entirely personal, metaphorical and naive derived from her exalted sensibility. When Frida Kahlo married Diego Rivera, Diego was 42 years old, and 300 pounds; Frida was 22 years old, and just 98 pounds. Her mother did not approve of the union and did not attend the wedding ceremony. She said that Diego was too old, too fat and worse yet he was a Communist and an atheist. She described the marriage as "... between an elephant and a dove." On one of Diego's frequent visits to the Kahlo home, Frida's father took Diego aside and said: "She is a devil". "I know..." Diego replied.

The Quote Book "Frida & Diego" is anthology of the important phrases of Frida and Diego. It provides their thoughts on topics ranging from love and art to death and revolution.
