She is destined to take the literary world by storm and breathe new life into the urban fiction market. Growing up, she received numerous accolades and awards for her writing skills. Refusing to become a victim of circumstance, Ms. Ervin was forced to buckle down and re-analyze the direction in which her life was going. Accepting motherhood as a blessing in disguise instead of a curse, she was forced to mature. Realizing she had another life depending upon her for survival, she cleaned up her act, severing her street ties and making the successful transition to motherhood and author. Hailing from the Midwest, St. Louis, MO to be exact, Keisha Ervin is determined to bring more long deserved recognition to her birthplace just as rappers Nelly, The St. Lunatics and Chingy have done. With her debut novel Me and My Boyfriend, Ms Ervin takes you on a journey to her hood where we meet Meesa and Black. We join them as they go through the motions of being young, black, living in the hood and in love. The drama ensues immediately, as the young couple soon finds out that it ain't good to do even half good in the hood.
